Excerpt from the Paris Almanac.

Paris, June 7. Yesterday the Dauphin made his Publick Entry into this City, under the Discharge of all the Cannon at the Hotel Royal des Invalides, the Town-House, and the Bastille. He was received at the Key of the Thuilleries by the Duke de Gesvres, and the Corps de Ville, who had the Honour to pay their Respect to him. He was followed by a prodigious Crowd, who cry'd out, Long live the Dauphin! to whom he threw Money. At the Entrance of the Cathedral he was received by the Chapter, with the Archbishop at their Head, who made him a Compliment. As soon as Mass was over, he went up to the Towers of the Church, in order to consider the City's utmost Extent; then he went to Dinner at the Castle of Muette, from whence he came back to walk in the Gardens of the Thuilleries, and then set out for Versailles.

The Gendarmerie, who were to have march'd on the 1st, will not now leave their Quarters till the 15th Instant.

M. Dumefnil, Brigadier-General of Horse in the Army of the Marshal Noailles, arriv'd here on the 3d. We are assured this Officer had been sent to the Emperor and Marshal Broglie, and that upon reporting his Answer to Marshal Noailles, he was directed to continue his Journey to Versailles with the utmost Diligence.

A Body of Troops, consisting of 25,000 Men, under the Command of M. the Prince de Dombes, are march'd from our Army on the Rhine to reinforce Marshal Broglie.

Ratisbon, May 28. Yesterday the Enemy attacked the Outworks of Deckendorff, sword in hand, and having carried them, storm'd the Place so vigorously, that after four Hours Resistance, our Troops were forc'd to abandon it, and to retire to the Retrenchments thrown up at the Head of the Bridge. The Regiment of Champagne, and four Companies of Grenadiers, who formed the Rear-Guard under the Command of M. de Troulay, Brigadier and Colonel of the Royal Regiment, finding the Bridge broke, forced their Way through the Enemy, with their Bayonets at the Head of their Muskets, and at last gained the Retrenchments. The Loss was on both Sides pretty equal.

The Prince of Conti, who came to the Relief of this Post, gave the highest Marks of Valour, and had a Horse shot under him. Messieurs Dannois and Du Caila did wonders, and so did M. Troulay. The Prince of Conti lost all his led Horses and Equipage, except his strong Box; and our Troops, in leaving the Place, set fire to the Magazine.

to put to Sea. This has occasion'd Admiral recalling all the Vessels belonging to his Fleet; of which, three that were on this Coast with a great Quantity of Provisions. The Cap- French Ship just arrived, reports, that he saw of Admiral Matthews at Sea, and that it con- 22 Sail of large Ships. Our Army in the Fe- Bolonois consists of 8000 Horse, and 13,000 Piedmontese increase daily. Some of our Huf- been lucky enough to get a Part of the Duke's Baggage; and, amongst other Things of Va- strong Box, in which were 18,000 Doubloons.

May 21. The War, that seems to have slum- for some time, is on a sudden awak'd. Count when it was least expected, gave Orders for the to be ready to march on 24 Hours Notice; im- mediately after, he dispatch'd an Officer hither to de- Quarters for his Troops. The Horse are to march the Ferrarese, the Foot thro' the Bolonois, and the Army is to join again at Faenza. If the Design of the Austrian General be to attack the Spanish Army, he must follow them to Naples, where most of their great Of- ficers are retired already; and if Accounts from various Places may be depended upon, their Infantry is already back to about 3000 Men. The Duchess of Modena has been received with extraordinary Civilities at Florence; but the Piedmontese General, Roccha, has signified to the Housekeepers in Modena, that since their Prince is at the Head of the opposite Army, he will hang up every one of the Inhabitants that shall attempt to quit the Place; and to prevent all conniving at Escapes, he makes the People in one House be Security for the next, and so on.

Nuremberg, May 30. Yesterday the People at Stadram- were so cruelly alarmed, that they sent all their Ef- fects hither in the utmost Confusion possible, the Panick having seized alike the Soldiers and the Townsfolk. The Cause was this: Some People had reported that Prince Lobkowitz was in Motion with all his Army; and thus much there was of Truth in it, that he actually advanc'd to Amberg, in search of Count Saxe, but the Towns- men were absolutely persuaded that he was in full March towards them; nay, so strong were the Fears of some, that they actually insisted they saw the Austrian Colours, upon which an Irish Regiment was detach'd to Weix, and encamped there all Night. It was likewise said, that the Austrians had taken Burglangensfeldt, and made 1500 Prisoners; but the next Morning it appear'd that there was no Truth in all this, and that the Report was occa- sion'd by the French Troops abandoning Bourglengens- feldt and Regenstauf, in order to retire to the Heights about this City. The Affair of Deckendorff proves much worse than we imagined. When the Pandours had made themselves Masters of the Lines, they fell upon all they met, without Distinction; above 40 Field-Offi- cers have been transported to Straubingen, desperately wounded, the rest of the Garison has been either taken or dispers'd. The Hussars make their Excursions to a vast Distance, and some say they have already pass'd the Danube.

Stadram, May 29. On the 26th we were excessively alarm'd, on hearing the News that Three Battalions of French Troops had march'd in the Evening out of Hei- delberg, and appear'd that Morning before Wimpfen, just as the Gates open'd, enter'd it, and put a Garison there. On this the 2500 Men who are here of the Troops of Franconia and Swabia, were immediately under Arms. We have ever since open'd the Gates with great Precau- tion, shut them very early, and have our Scouts con- stantly abroad. We are likewise collecting great Quan- tities of Provision and Forage, as if we in earnest appre- hended a Siege.

Brussels, June 7. At the great Entertainment given by his Excellency, our Governor, on Monday the 3d In- stant, on account of the Queen's Coronation at Prague, her Majesty's Arms were expos'd to publick View on a Table and Ewer of Silver, which were given as a Prize to be shot for, with these Verses underneath.
